Rules to Remember:

1. To begin, all players roll one Die. The player with the highest roll begins the game, with play continuing to the left.
2. You must score at least 500 points before you can "save" your points and begin recording a score.
3. You must remove at least one Die after each roll.
4. If you cannot set aside any Dice, that's a FARKLE! You lose your points for that turn only.
5. If you use all 6 Dice to create points, you can take an additional turn, but be careful - you might FARKLE!
6. You begin the final round once someone has reached 10,000 or more points. Then each player gets one turn to try and beat their score.

There are some additional scores for special combinations, and there are a lot of variations about this (see more variations on the Wikipedia page). Once setting aside the scoring dice from their throw, the player must choose whether to end their turn ("stay") and bank the score accumulated so far by writing it on the scratch paper, or to continue to throw the remaining dice as before in pursuit of a larger score. If the player has scored all six dice, they have "hot dice" and may continue their turn with a new throw of all six dice, continuing to add to their turn's cumulative score. After having reached the threshold once, they are free to stop throwing in subsequent turns whenever they choose. At the beginning of each turn, the player throws all 6 dice at once. After each throw, the player reviews the dice for scoring. Then the next player rolls the six dice until they Pass or Farkle.
